THEY ARE STALWARTS, TOO.

The positive announcement of Senator Aldrich's intention to retire from the United States Senate, where he has so long been a fearless and able leader, and of Senator Hale, who also has a record of thirty years of valiant service, comes as a strong reminder of the fact that falling health in the most capable men creates a stern necessity which they ought not to fail to recognize and give due consideration, for the sake of their physical well being. For some time past it has been clear that Senator Aldrich was working beyond his physical capacity of endurance, and now his physician emphatically insists that he lay down the senatorial responsibility, if he would not shorten materially his years in life. Senator Hale, too, is in ill health, and only rest and care will prolong his days to any considerable extent.

These men have been stalwart leaders for the development of this country. They have been associated, in their time, with such other stalwarts as Senators Spooner and Foraker, and others, numbers of whom have retired from the Senate by the advance of years or the fate of politics, and whose vacant places have not always been filled from their respective states by men of as good ability. Senators Aldrich and Hale have been in the forefront of national life during the critical and important period when this nation emerged into its present position as one of the great world powers; they did their full share of work in accomplishing that result, and of them it must be truthfully said that they never shrank from a public duty, never faltered, whether the contest was dull or fierce.

The nation will feel the retirement of these men from active participation in its public affairs. Just how much it will be a loss depends somewhat on the courage and ability of those who take their places; but loss it will be, because of the experience that goes with them, and that they cannot impart to others, and the confidence reposed in them that must be gained by others in actual test.

It is not to be wondered at, though every good and true person will disapprove of it, that there are many writers and speakers who come prominently before the public, and who persist in saying harsh and unjust things against these men. Some to whom their courage and convictions of duty would not allow them to yield, notably what is today known as the insurgent element in their party, take occasion to say that the retirement of these two senators is due to their fear of meeting an aroused hostile sentiment among the people rather than to the real cause, as given by the senators themselves. The great life's work of Aldrich and Hale, their unflinching courage in many a more trying crisis than now, and when facing a much more certain prospect of hostile sentiment on former occasions, is ignored by their traducers, who prefer to obscure the record in order to gain their own ends. Such tactics may prevail for a time, but they cannot endure.

Regrettable as it is, the country sees and hears an immense volume of unjust assault upon its capable leading men during their lifetime. Abraham Lincoln and William McKinley were thus assailed up to the very day when they were stricken. Their great virtues, their value as pillars of strength to the nation, their worthiness for a place among its leaders, never were recognized by the fault-finders and muckrakers until the assassin's bullet placed these stalwart heroes in the shadow of death. Then there was a rush to bedeck their graves with the flowers of unstinted praise. Senators Aldrich, Hale and others like and with them, will have lots of good said of them when their bodies are beneath the sod, and their hearts cannot be cheered by human words of encouragement.

Nearly two thousand years ago, a notably historic race was admonished for stoning its prophets, then garnishing their sepulchres. There are people today who have not taken the lesson to heart.

However, no matter what may be said of them, Senators Aldrich and Hale have been brave and stalwart workers for the Republican party and the American nation; and in this latest political battle, along the line of their life careers, their bravery and stalwartness are untarnished and are rather brightened by another exhibition by those men of fidelity to the cause of good and efficient government.

TRAINING FOR MOTHERHOOD.

The University of Missouri has adopted the suggestion of Dr. Edna May of that institution and has started a course of bathing, dressing, feeding and playing with babies, and hopes to install a day nursery also, as well as outdoor play rooms and a scientific kitchen for preparing children's foods properly.

The course will be no mere feminine recreation, but an accredited and serious study. The Missouri university is the first state-supported school to take this new step in educating women. The matter is a vital one, as it deals with the preventing of mortality among infants. America needs a more intelligent and trained motherhood, and Missouri's university will help to prepare future mothers for their share in the world's vital work.

JUDGE T. C. MUNGER.

For the past ten days Judge Thomas C. Munger, United States judge for the district of Nebraska, has been in Salt Lake City. His presence here was caused by Judge Marshall having been called to conduct court in the Oklahoma district; and the work there having been completed for the present, Judge Munger closed his services here yesterday, and leaves this morning for his home in Lincoln, Neb., where he opens a term of court on Monday morning next.

During his brief stay here, and upon a former visit a little over a year ago, Judge Munger made many warm friends, official and otherwise, and among both legal fraternity and business men. He expresses himself as highly pleased with Utah, and certainly those who have come in contact with him reciprocate the feeling as to himself; and all speak in warm commendation of his geniality, equanimity, broadmindedness and ability, which characterize him as a man entirely worthy of the prominence he has attained in official life.

It is very gratifying to recognize in those who come here the desirable qualities that mark such men on their visits to this state; and it is just as much a source of gratification to realize that these men carry away with them the good impressions they gain of Utah by actual contact with her representative citizens. We wish for Judge Munger a safe and pleasant journey to his field of duty, and trust that Utah will greet him many times in the future.

MUST PULL TOGETHER.

"Now, gentlemen," said Benjamin Franklin just after the Declaration of Independence had been signed, "we must all hang together." Then he added reflectively, "if we don't we shall surely hang separately."

The regular Republicans in Congress are endeavoring to get together for the purpose of passing the administration bills. The insurgents, however, are skirmishing around, and so far it has been impossible to obtain a party majority.

Benjamin Franklin was wise in his day and generation. His advice to the colonists to hang together in order to avoid hanging separately might be taken to heart by these members of the Republican party today greatly to their profit and edification. Unless a united front is presented the enemy will triumph. The question is "can the Republicans get together?"

Messrs. Dooliver, Cummins, LaFollette and Clapp, and the rest of the insurgents, seem bent on hanging separately, and that is probably what will happen to them in due course of time.

The Republican party has survived many a storm, and is stronger today than at any time in its history. Allowing the insurgents the full strength claimed, the Republican party is still in the majority and capable of doing business. All the members of the party have to do is to hang together. If they fail, of course, Ben Franklin's motto applies.

Sixty thousand Chicago inhabitants changed their places of residence on May 1. Chicago people were always great on the move.

Citizens who arose early yesterday to view the comet were entitled to rain checks.

JUST LIKE A MEMBER.

Every one here knows the Brook club, says the New York correspondent of the Cincinnati Times-Star. That is the famous organization to which Harry Thaw and Stanford White belonged, as told in the Thaw trial, and won its name because, like the brook in the poem, "it goes forever." The greater part of the members of the Brook club turn night into day habitually. The real, top-notch high rollers of town belong almost to a man—but the cheap brand of Broadway spenders, who buy wine in a tone that can be heard from Grant's tomb to the Battery, can't get past the doors.

The other night, according to the yarn, Finley Peter Dunne wanted a taxi cab at the club. He told John, who superintends the outside of the Brook, of his needs. The cab came. John thrust his head through the doors to notify Mr. Dunne. Mr. Dunne came to the door, getting into a broadloom overcoat. "This way, cabbie," said John, in his most magnificent way, turning to address the chauffeur. John's foot slipped and he spilled himself down the steps on his ear. "Ah, John," said Mr. Dunne, shaking his head sorrowfully. "You must be more careful of your reputation, John. You ought not to come down stairs that way. People will take you for one of the members."

COULDN'T SIGNAL IT.

(Tit-Bits.)

Admiral Moore tells a good story of a peppy old seaman under whom he served many years ago. During some tactical operations one of the ships of the squadron had made some bad blunders, and at length the admiral completely lost his temper. He stormed about his quarterdeck and informed his hearers of his opinion of the officer in command of the erring ship. When he paused for want of breath he turned to the signaler and said to him, "And you can tell him that, sir!"

The man scratched his head meditatively. "I beg your pardon, sir," he ventured, "but I don't think we have quite enough flags for your message."

KEPT HIS WORD.

(Cleveland Plain Dealer.)

At the banquet to the humorist organization, given at the Hotel Stratford by the Buffalo Chamber of Commerce, a Chicago visitor told how a resident of his town had lost a watch in the streets of Buffalo and then hurried to the nearest police station to report the calamity.

The sergeant listened to his story with respectful interest. "You may rest assured, sir," he said to the Chicago man, "that we will leave no stone unturned in our efforts to recover your property."

Two years later the Chicago man was in Buffalo again. He looked around at the Buffalo street and then hurried to the police station.

"Why, sergeant," he cried, "I see you kept your word, but I didn't expect you'd tear up all of 'em!"

Tom Thompson

The Tailor on Third South street has a brand new $1,500.00 automobile. We collected it for him. It is not often people have to employ us to help them buy an automobile, but in this case it was a question whether Tom Thompson or some other person should have this particular machine. Tom Thompson insisted he had bargained for it first—we helped him insist. The result is Tom is riding in a new machine. When you want an automobile collected, see us.

We have 12 rooms, but so we can tell what paper you read address your answer to Room No. 83 Commercial Block.
